Source: Austin and Austin, 1989 (as cited in Smith et al. , 1994) A single set of data is available indicating microbial content in aquaculture injectate. All samples of injectate at Sea Life Park (HI) had coliform bacteria present (see Tables 3 and 6). This does not provide a useful indication of the possible presence of microbial pathogens in all types of aquaculture injectate, however. Sea Life Park raises marine mammals (for display purposes), and the microbial content in the effluent from this operation is probably very different from that of the great majority of aquaculture operations that raise non-mammal species for food. Similarly, the types of chemicals, pesticides, and additives used in aquaculture are well known, but their incidence and concentrations in aquaculture effluents are not well quantified for the industry as a whole. . .
