In my opinion, all these cases were genuine. . . The men were divided into seven gangs, each ganger having under him 35 to 40 men. A walking ganger was placed in charge of all gangers and men and outside work, to see that work was carried out as ordered. One ganger was in charge of the huts, wash-houses, etc., one man being allowed him for each hut, their duties being to make up beds, sweep, and wash out, and keep everything in good order. . . Boots I found some difficulty with. I would suggest that men arriving on a Colony and wanting boots, should have them at cost price, in the same way as the clothing. Also that outside gangers should be employed, and that they should be held responsible for all tools under their charge, proper lists being made out and given to each ganger. I noticed that the men who came down later were much better men than those who came down at the beginning, being better behaved and better workmen. We had, at the latter end of the contract, to do several hundred yards of sewer work. Each man was measured out a day s work and told he would be finished for the day as soon as he got it done. The measurement of the work was 9 ft. x 2 ft. 6 in. wide x 8 ft. deep. Fifty...
