Paperback. Book Condition: New. Not Signed; Enter the gas-lit streets of post-war Prague, the steelworks run by singed men, the covered market that smells of new-born babes, the cacophonous open-air dance hall. Mr Kafka is avoiding his landlady's blueberry wine breath, a stonemason witnesses the destruction of a monument to Stalin he risked his life to build, and factory men strain to catch a glimpse of a beautiful bathing murderess. In these previously unknown stories, Hrabal captures men and women in an eerily beautiful nightmare and their spirit in all its misery and splendour. book.
